Sweet, who is at present in Colorado and had only been put in the barn last Friday. The barn, which was 40x70, was about 100 feet from the dwelling house.

More Trouble From Electric Storm

Trolley Power Cut Down Again—Transformer Burnt Out at City Electric Light Plant—Scotland Dam Station Also Out of Business—Some Washouts in City Streets.

Norwich experienced another storm on Sunday of the tropical type in suddenness and volume of rainfall accompanied with heavy thunder and lightning, although not so severe as that of last Thursday which broke the long dry spell. The total rainfall for the day probably easily exceeded an inch.

About 8 o'clock the first heavy rain arrived, and about 11 o'clock there was more rain in torrents, with heavy thunder and lightning, the latter recording its presence by partially crippling the trolley system and also the power plant of the Unicus Power company at the Scotland dam, as well as the city power plant on North Main street.

The electric fluid got into the rotary case at the Thamesville power plant of the trolley company, and caused a ring, and causing a four hour curtailment of the service until repairs were completed at about 4:30 o'clock. The big turbine engine at Thamesville, which has just been repaired after a complete eclipse through an electric storm, was not hurt this time, but the electric fluid got into the small engine available to run only the street cars. The rotary was repaired so that the full service was restored by 6 o'clock.

The electric got the heavy part of the storm, and the cars were burned out on that line. They were some distance out in the country and away from any telephone when it happened, so the launch had to be sent to the nearest telephone for the crew to send.

In word of their trouble, and the tieup was consequently harder to straighten out. This line also suffered much from sand washing over the tracks, and some crews had almost to shovel their way to Willamantic.

On the lines of the Southern New England Telephone company, which had hardly got straightened out from the trouble from last Thursday's storm, the damage was slight, probably about 25 lines, all local, being affected.

At the Norwich electrical plant on North Main street one transformer was burned out, and at the Unicus Power company station Scotland dam a number of switches were lost. The trouble at the power station came at about the middle of church service time, depriving some of the churches of lights and of power to run their organs.

Falling limbs from trees brought down a pair of the city department wires at the fair grounds, and there was also a pair of wires down on Starr street.

Around the city Street Commissioner's bridge was given work to do by the washouts, but none of any great seriousness. There was a gully cut in Yantic street and one in Division street opposite station avenue.

About 3:15 o'clock came the concluding shower of the day, this deluge being without any special electrical accompaniment.

HARTFORD EXPECTS TO GET BOSCH MAGNETO COMPANY.

State Capital Looking for Concern That Recently Considered Norwich.

In view of some expectations which had been raised that the Bosch Magneto company of Springfield, Mass., might move to this city, the following from the Hartford Times indicates that that city has some assurances that the Bosch people will locate there.

The efforts that the Bosch Magneto company, which has its plant at Brightwood, in Chicopee and Springfield, is making to secure relief from odor nuisances occasioned by the Springfield Provision company indicates that the company intends to keep its plant in Springfield, Mass., time before removing to Hartford. The men at the garage found they were having trouble holding the fire down with two tanks of chemical and accordingly called on the firemen.
